MONDAY, MARCH 24, 1861.

A Handsome Streak of Good Luck.
The Whig of the country may well rejoice at the good luck which has recently turned up for them. They have had a noble lot of donations added to their number.
—Missouri had very handsomely in the election of a United States Senator, a man of talents and influence. Those who had elected a Senator with sympathies and pledges in favor of the whites, and practically as good as a whig, in need. The legislature of New Jersey gave a Senator in agreement with the whigs of the great measure of protection to home labor in the great State of Ohio has elected a Senator, and the legislature of New York has elected a Senator, and a man of talents and influence in that State, and a man of talents and influence in that State.
New Hampshire has elected two Representatives to Congress who are whigs for all practical legislative purposes.
The tide seems to be very favorably turned in favor of the whigs, and greater success may be expected in the future. Through the country will be among themselves for points of agreement, rather than for points of difference. There are no two men who agree precisely to everything, hence it is important that they should thus agree. Still, it is with the whigs they have their various points of difference of opinion on theories, on measures and on men. These do not harm them since they agree upon the essential and practical measures for the good of the country and the success of the party. In reference to these matters they may unite their action and should do so as a matter of principle and a matter of party policy. If they will act upon these principles, their future prospects are hopeful, but if they should forget their true relation and endeavor only to magnify their differences between them into yawning and insuperable gulfs, and expend all their force to put each other in the wrong, they may find by and by that while they have quarreled their enemies have triumphed.

Our correspondent, "A Son of Massachusetts," has made a capital suggestion for a festival of the Sons of the Old Bay State, residents in Bangor and vicinity. It would indeed be a goodly gathering, including all in the profession and business of the State. We trust there may be such a meeting, a reunion in this State of their adoption, to recall the pleasant memories of home, and historical associations and personal experiences to give utterance to the thoughts that crowd upon the mind, and the emotions that stir the heart, in the recollections of this noble State of their birth. We go for the "Sons." What say others interested?

Dr. Decker's lecture before the Mercantile Association on Friday evening, was upon the subject of Amusement, which he handled in a able manner and wrought into it so great a variety that he made it to be very humorous and highly intelligent, an illustration of his subject. It gave reference far beyond the limits of all who listened. It was one of the most satisfactory, instructive and practical lectures the course.

Dr. Chamberlain, Esq. of Bangor, has received a copy of a very beautiful book, which he has written, entitled "The Whig and the Whig." It resembles the whig so much, that it is a pity, except that it is a book, that it is not a whig. Mr. Chamberlain will give this book a fair trial. Our friends in California cannot do a more agreeable thing than to send home specimens of their work, particularly good and flower, and a book.
